

Common competency for ASEAN Doctors (derived from 10 medical schools)

Proposed definition (from Dr.Coralie, Dr.Cherdsak and Dr.Suwannee 28032018)

Concensus (from 7th ASEAN Medical Dean Summit, Hanoi, Vietnam 22-24 August 2018)

1. Clinical competency: Ability to approach, gather clinical information, diagnose, investigate, provide treatment, rehabilitate the patients in clinical settings, promote health, and prevent disease
 - 1.1 Medical knowledge: preclinical knowledge, clinical knowledge, patient safety
 - 1.2 Clinical skills: history taking, physical examination, diagnosis, procedural skills, health promotion and disease prevention
2. Communication and interpersonal skills: Ability to communicate, and collaborate with others
 - 2.1 Teaching skills: small group, large group, patient education
 - 2.2 Communication skills: written, verbal communication, media, presentation
 - 2.3 Cultural competency: understanding and living with people from other cultures
3. Professional manner and ethics: Ability to work in a professional manner guided by ethical and legal standards
 - 3.1 Professional ethics: ethical principles and practice
 - 3.2 Legal standards: professional laws and regulations
 - 3.3 Social accountability
4. Self awareness and professional development through lifelong learning: Ability to regularly reflect and update oneself by utilizing a variety of avenues for continuing personal and professional growth
5. Research skills: Ability to systematically search and appraise literature and utilize new knowledge in patient care
 - 5.1 Evidence- based practice
 - 5.2 Critical appraisal
 - 5.3 Medical information management
6. Systems-based approach to healthcare: Ability to identify and integrate available health systems in providing patient and population care in various health care delivery settings including times of disaster
7. Leadership and management of healthcare team: Ability to work collaboratively and effectively as a leader or follower in a healthcare team, including working with other health professionals